From Saturday, FEBRUARY 9, to Saturday, FEBRUARY 16. 1733-4.

Continuation of the MANIFESTO begun in our last.

¶ If this sufficiently proves, on the one hand, the great Care which that Noble Nation has, upon all Occasions taken for the Preservation of its precious Liberty, and the Zeal as well as the Aversion it has shewn against the Violences of a Candidate, who was intruded by Force of Arms in the Lifetime of Augustus, his Lawful King; and on the other hand, who are the Republic's true Friends, whether the Faction; who in despite of the Rights of all the free Nobility, would introduce Regem ex legem, a King excluded by the Laws; or the Neighbouring Powers, who without any Interest, and only out of Affection, oppose such Violences in a free Republick, and are only willing to protect those who implore their help, at a time when several Senators, Ministers of State, and Nuncio's complain that the Primate and his Party oppress their Liberty all manner of ways. Those Violences consist in the following Points.

1. That of 300 Nuncio's who were present in the Dyet of Convocation, every one of whom had a Right to vote before the Senators entered into Deliberation, much less came to a Resolution, not more than 17 gave their Votes, the rest not being permitted to collect their Suffrages.

2. That tho' according to the Fundamental Laws, every Gentleman is at Liberty to vote in the Field of Election, their Liberæ Voces were restrained; and though several Palatinates recommended it to their Nuncio's, even upon Oath, not to give the Exclusion to any Person whomsoever, the Primate and his Party took upon them, ever since the Dyet of Convocation, without having first taken all the Votes, to give with a high Hand, and contrary to the Intention of the Palatinates, the Exclusion to Foreigners; to make it an Article of the Confederacy; and to cause it to be ratified upon Oath.

3. That the Primate; not content with all this, did not consider, that even supposing the Exclusion had been unanimously resolved upon in the Dyet of Election by those 300 Nuncio's, it is not in the Power of so small a Number to restrain, in the Field of Election, the Free Will of all the Nobles, whose Number amounts to upwards of 100,000; which did not hinder the Primate from using Violence to get that Oath taken upon the Articles of that Confederacy, which were never approved.

4. That that Oath is without Precedent; that most People were tricked into it; that the Primate first took the said Oath, and after him his Partisans; and that the rest were forced to it, notwithstanding the Protestations that were made.

5. That a Nuncio of Prussia having protested against the Oath, his Liberum Voto was not only disregarded, but he was obliged to be silent, being threatened to be thrown out of the Window.

6. That a certain Palatine offering to oppose the Oath, and to demand the Liberty of Voting, he was threatened to be cut in pieces, his Estate to be confiscated, and he to be declared an Enemy to his Country, if he did not take the Oath immediately; so that upon this Occasion may be observed the effects of metus cadens in constantes viros; and others met with the same Treatment.

LONDON, Oct. 25.

BY a Flanders Mail, this Day, 'tis assured from Berlin, That King Stanislaus

assiv'd

Arrived the 15th Inst. at Duysburg, a small City belonging to the King of Prussia, with an Interpreter and two Domesticks only, to return by way of Munster to Paris. If the Accounts, by a Mail from France, this Day, be true, the Emperours Affairs on the Side of Italy are in a sad Condition, it being advised from Turin of the 20th last, that the French Army had entered Piemont four different ways, marching to join on the Frontiers of the Milanese, and thence to Milan, having only Novara, a place of small Consequence, in their Way; and afterwards to attack Pavia, Cremona, Tortona, and to invest Mantua, the Emperor having only 12000 Men, as they say, in the Milanese, and but little Artillery and Provisions. His Imperial Majesty depending on the Alliance of the King of Sardinia neglected the putting himself in a better State of Defence; and his Minister at Turin, it seems, knew nothing of the Alliance between France and Spain till he heard of the French having passed Mount Cenis, and that a Report was current at Turin of the News being come by Express from Leghorn of the Spaniards having made a Descent in Sicily. We learn by Letters from Hannover, that the 10000 Men which his Majesty is engaged to furnish the Emperor, are ready to march to the Rhine as soon as his Imperial Majesty shall think proper to demand them: 'Tis added, that those Troops are to be commanded by General Melville.

We have an Account from Spain, that the Count de Rothemburg, the French Ambassador at that Court, had no sooner received an Express from Versailles, with the Conclusion of the late important Treaty with the King of Sardinia, but he sent to ask a Conference with Don Patinho, the Spanish Prime Minister, and sent likewise at the same time a Token, by which that Gentleman understood the Business; whereupon he arose from Dinner, drove directly to the Count's, and in his Coach received the news of the grand Affair, and there concerted the proper Measures to be taken in Consequence. Those Ministers did not quit their Coach till every thing was concluded; and to quicken the Orders issued thereupon, that when Messieurs Keen and Vander-Meer, the British and Dutch Ministers, who, having scent of the Matter, ran directly to Don Patinho, and told him their Mind, that Minister answered all they could say, with, Gentlemen, 'tis now too late. Mr. Keen in vain assured him that the Emperor's Cette-Blanche was actually on the Road, for granting, under the Mediation of Great Britain, all his Catholick Majesty could desire in relation to Don Carlos; in vain he represented to him the Danger of running into precipitate Engagements, for the same Answer was repeated to him, Sir, 'tis now too late; the Orders are already gone to the Fleet and the Army to act in concert with the Arms of France and Sardinia.

London Oct. 30. Concerning the Marriage of the Princess Royal with the Prince of Orange, (which is the Subject of much Conversation) People who pretend to be learned in History and the Records of this Kingdom say, that the preparations for it and manner of solemnizing it are copied after that of K. James I.'s Daughter with the Elector of Palatine, (afterwards King of Bohemia) the last marriage of a Princess Royal of England; but they agree, this will exceed that in Splendour and Magnificence, suitable to the Improvements made from such distant Period of time.

The Chapel in which it is to be performed is built by the famous Inigo Jones, and has one of the most admir'd Ceilings in England. The Area before the Altar is to be rais'd some Steps, and a Throne made thereon for their Highnesses to repose themselves whilst the Musick is playing. Seats will be made round the Chappel for the Nobility as at a Coronation. The Chappel is to be illuminated in a most splendid Manner, and the sides all hung with Velvet and rich Tapestry. The Procession to it will be through a Gallery nine foot wide, covered from the Weather, but so far open as to give a View to the Spectators, for whom Stalls will be erected in the Area between the Royal Gardens & Marlborough-House. The Gallery from the Palace to the Chapel is about 500 Yards, in 3 different Angles, 24 Feet high, has a Ridge like that of an House, a boarded floor to walk on covered with Cloath, and a roof over that about 12 Feet high. The Breadth is 10 Yards. On each Side are 4 Rows of Seats, one above the other, to contain about 5000 Spectators to see the Procession; and the Area between the Seats is 23 Feet wide. And 200 Men work'd hard all last Sunday to finish it. As to the Prince of Orange, we have yet no News of his Arrival, nor Words countering very strong and contrary. The Embroiderers, Jewellers, Gold- and Silver-Ribbon-Weavers, and other Artificers, have been for some time employed night and day on occasion of this Marriage.

Last

Just Night about 7 a-Clock died at Harrow on the Hill, after a tedious Indisposition, Her Grace the Junior Dutchess of Marlborough. By her Death the Title of Marlborough descends to the present Earl of Sunderland, now Duke of Marlborough, with an Estate of 30,000 L. per Ann. and the Title of Earl of Sunderland, with that Estate, devolves to his Brother John Spen-

LONDON Oct. 27. What was mentioned in my last of the Van-Guard of the French Army being arrived on the Frontiers of the Milaneze is confirmed by an Holland Mail, and that they were actually at Vercel-li, 40 Miles West of Milan, which City and Country was on that Account under the greatest Consternation possible; the Countess of Daun, the Governor's Lady, the Ministers and Nobility, being fled with their best Effects, and all were in a hurry preparing to make what Defence they can, till the Succours sent for to Vienna are arrived. They have received the same News at Vienna, and are hurrying away all the Troops which can be spared to the Milaneze; but 'tis apprehended, will be in no Condition to oppose France and her Allies, so powerful as they are, or be able to stop their making a considerable Progress, even this Winter.

Nov. 1. Yesterday Sir Philip Yorke, Knt.
his Majesty's Attorney-General, was call'd to the Degree of a Serjeant at Law at Westminster Hall, with the usual Ceremonies; on which Occasion he gave an elegant Entertainment at Serjeants-Inn Hall to several of the Judges, Serjeants at Law, and other Persons of Distinction: And on Tuesday next he will sit as Lord Chief Justice of England, at the Court of King's Bench, Westminster, his Majesty's Royal Patent having pass'd the Seals for that purpose.

They write from Madrid, that the King of Spain's Manifesto, or Reasons for declar-
